the opening of the Old Testament is first announcement of the Redeemer. But the centuries his person and work set forth. And now the last word of the Old Testament is a description of the one who will yet tarry for four hundred years. The Old Testament is Christo-centric.

MATTHEW.
We have Four Gospels and not simply one. It is evident from the design of each that they were written for different purposes and hence their characteristics are different. Matthew's Gospel would not meet the needs of the other Gospels, just as the other Gospels would not meet the needs of the Gospel of Matthew. For this reason, while there is a value in a Harmony of the Gospels, it is more important that they be studied from the standpoint of their characteristics. The same thing reported by more than one of the Gospels might have a different application in each case according to the character and design of each.

According to Mark, Matthew was the son of Alphaeus (Mk. ii. 14). He was a collector of taxes under the Roman government and it was he who held his appointment at Capernaum. One of the apostles. His work brought close dealings with men and he would not be easily duped.

He speaks of a work written by Matthew, which would be meant Aramaic, one of the sayings of our Lord. Jerome says that the Hebrew Gospel of Matthew was preserved in the library at Caesarea. By internal and external proofs the genuineness of Matthew's Gospel is well established, as any work of classical antiquity. It is used among Christians at an early day, and at the end of the first century the apostolic Church accepted it as having canonical authority.

According to the early Fathers it was written for Jewish readers. None of the other Gospels quotes so largely from the Old Testament. Jewish rites and expressions are not used by Matthew as is done by Mark and Luke. It is evident from the book itself that it was written for the Jews. Setting forth the promised Messiah of the Old Testament, the Sermon on the Mount shows the one to which he stood to that covenant.

John, as reported by Matthew, gives a sense of arrangement and unity that is distinctive place among all the other Gospels.

According to the date of Matthew's Gospel, Origen places it before the others. He is likewise, but assigns a much later date. DeWette admits that it was written before the destruction of Jerusalem (A. D. 70) and is probably written about A. D. 60.

Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord; that walketh in his ways. Thy wife shall be as a fruitful vine by the sides of thine house: thy children like olive plants round about thy table. Behold, that thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord. Psalms 128. 1, 3, 4.
