Karoline worked in Evanston, IL, where she advertised for a husband in the newspaper. When a "very handsome" man (Kirsten Ween's description) showed up, she was too embarrassed to answer the door. She later worked in brother Frederik's delicatessen in San Francisco before moving to Santa Barbara, CA. Nieces Hulda and Thelma roomed with her while attending UC Santa Barbara.

Frederik went to school for seven years. When he was 7 years of age, he worked for another farmer herding pigs and moving cattle that were staked to chains. One winter, he went to high school, boarding there. His sister, Lena, was the first to come to the US, followed by Martin. Frederik left third, in January 1906, to see his uncles and aunts, Anders, Hans, Marie and Marta Madsen, in Missouri. Finding little economic opportunity in Missouri, he continued on to San Francisco in April. The day after his arrival, he was awakened by his bed sliding across the floor during the great earthquake and was so frightened that he left for the Sierra Nevada Mountains, where he worked in lumber mills near Shaver Lake in the summer. In the winter, he and brother Martin wintered on the farm of some Danes called Jensen in Eastin, near Fresno, working in the vineyards, scraping land. This was where he learned to play poker. The next summer, he worked on a farm on Jersey Island in the San Joaquin/Sacramento Delta and then for Spreckels Sugar in Crockett. Hulda recalls also that he worked for a while building ships in San Francisco and driving a delivery wagon in the Delta.

He and a partner bought a grocery store in San Francisco, then sold it. He bought a grocery/butcher shop on Market Street, called Jensen, Jacobsen and Christiansen, a partnership they formed for $750 each. He next rented a delicatessen on Pacific Street off Fillmore and Jackson Streets from a Mr. Hahn, and his sister, Lena, went to work for him, making pies and hot fruits, although only for a short time. Kirsten Ween, who followed Lena to San Francisco, came to work for him, too. Fred and Kirsten soon married. Fred bought 48 acres of land south of Turlock in the Tegner School district, across the road from Chattom Ranch. They had to buy horses, implements and furniture.

Carl, Arne and Jamie were born there. Fred became disgusted and sold out, then returned to SF in 1913, renting an apartment on Jackson St. for $25/month. He searched the streets daily for work but could find none. They returned to the area near Turlock, living on Kristoffertson Lane near Monte Vista, then moved to another house near Carpenter and Bradbury Roads, where they rented 40 acres next door to the previous farm and built a 2-room cabin. After a year, they got back the 48 acres. During this time, he worked weeks in Empire, walking home to Turlock on the weekends. They were reportedly so poor that Kirsten could not even afford a postage stamp to write to her brothers to ask for a loan.

After the World War I started, times got better, and they moved to Modesto. In 1917, Fred traded his place for 140 acres on Tuolumne road in Modesto--where Hulda was born--and a house in San Jose. He sold the house for $800. In 1919, he moved to Carpenter Road, where he lived for the rest of his years..

d 1983 Modesto, CA

Kirsten moved to Egersund from Sandnes when she was six, after her father died. She first took care of the Friestad kids, then, at 14, went to work at Jensen's store. She wanted to go to Kristiansand to learn how to be a telephone operator, but her mother didn't think that was a proper job for a young lady and wouldn't allow her to leave home. Kirsten decided to move to America instead.

Kirsten arrived in Ellis Island on the Caronia

on 3 May 1907 from Liverpool
(Manifest Line Number: 0019) and took the train to Chicago, wearing a white ribbon so her Midbrød cousin would recognize her at the train station. She worked for this cousin, taking care of his two children, Myrtle and Alice (who later moved to Florida). When she could stand those children no longer, she took another job, traveling with her boss' family to Boston, working in his laundry room on Beacon Hill and also on Martha's Vineyard. Then she worked for another family in Evanston, IL, for $1/week, where she met Lena Christiansen, through whom she met Frederik.
Was life over for the young Kirsten as soon as she had met her man? Stay tuned for Lily Eaton's next installment, when.. Kirsten lives again!

Ernst was killed by the Danish Resistance during WWII in a forest near Sorø for spying for the Nazis, according to Kristen Ween Christiansen in a remark to Jon Frederick Christiansen upon his return from a trip to Danmark in 1967. KWC continued that nobody in Danmark would tell him this story because they were still too embarrassed about it. But according to Birgit Larsen, Verner told her that Ernst had been mistaken for his girlfriend's brother, who was a "hippo" (Nazi policeman), and was killed for this reason.
